Remembering Cliff Schmucker (1954—2013)

Clifford Schmucker, age 58, of Lebanon, Ohio, died in a skydiving accident on Sunday, May 26, 2013.

Cliff served as a trustee of the National Skydiving Museum. He supported the preservation of the history of the parachute industry and the sport of skydiving. He was the technology expert on the Board of Cliff Schmucker was more than a leader, he was a doer.

As an engineer with a love for skydiving, he had the technical expertise that he put to work for the PIA, the Museum, and our industry.

Some people cannot be replaced. Cliff was that type of person.

Dan Poynter, Museum Trustee

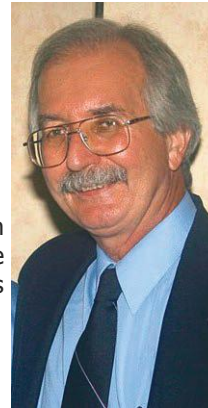

Trustees, supplying Internet expertise and audiovisual equipment.

Cliff was the president of the Parachute Industry Association for nearly 20 years. During that time, the PIA membership quadrupled as the parachute industry grew and government and military organizations joined. Cliff provided steady and innovative leadership and guidance to the industry association.

An electrical engineer, he was President of SSK Industries Inc. in Lebanon, Ohio. SSK operates the US sales and service office for the CYPRES automatic activation device. More than 83,000 CYPRES units are in use.

Dori Bachman honored by Banic Foundation

Museum trustee Dori Bachman received the 2013 Štefan Banič gold medal for her lifetime contributions to the sport of skydiving as owner of ParaGear Equipment Company. On behalf of the Banič Foundation Chairman of the Board Slavo Mulik, Dori was honored during the museum's three-day Hall of Fame weekend celebration at Skydive Chicago, Ottawa, IL.

Lowell Bachman, Dori's late husband, founded ParaGear in 1960 in the Chicago area and Dori joined him as his partner when they married in 1970. She and her two sons, Chris and Curt, maintain the business, having sold parachuting equipment to well over 125 countries to date.

The Štefan Banič Parachute Foundation was established in 1997 by Texas resident Slavo Mulik to recognize and honor those who have made significant contributions and/or achievements in skydiving. The foundation's goal is to enhance and promote the sport in honor of the inventor of the parachute in 1914, Štefan Banič of Czechoslovakia, who became a US citizen.

Museum Trustees Lee Schlichtemeier and Chris Needels present fellow trustee Dori Bachman with the 2013 Štefan Banič gold medal.
